

CENTER FOR THE JUNIOR YEAR

Luck happens when preparation meets opportunity.

Through the Center for the Junior Year, you'll learn to create preparation and opportunities...and craft your undergraduate experience.

The Center for the Junior Year is a space where you can begin to reflect on the relationship between your learning and how you perceive your personal sense of purpose.

CJY will help you learn how to identify your career goals and craft the learning opportunities at GSU into a marketable field of study. We'll work with you to find those experiential learning experiences and internships that work for you.

The Center for the Junior Year offers all General Studies, Undecided, and Transfer students preparing to transition into their junior year a place to talk about their educational and personal interests and how to find the right academic program to meet their needs.

But the Center is also open to all students to help them make the best of what GSU has to offer.

How do I engage with CJY?

- Sign up to meet with a Peer Success Coach who will work with you throughout the year
- Set up an appointment with the CJY staff
- Stop by during office hours for a walk-in session

Benefits of meeting with a CJY advisor:

- Get a better sense of your career/vocational direction and how to build an undergraduate education program that will help you best utilize the resources at GSU
- Think about how to integrate your field of study, experiential learning, and career development
- Learn how your field of study opens the doors to the "hidden job" market, professional school (e.g., Business, Law, Physical Therapy/ Occupational Therapy, Medical School) or graduate school
